

Gender and neoliberal Academia

24th May 2018

Department of Social and Political Sciences
University of Milan
Via Conservatorio 7, Milano
Sala Lauree, 15.00 -18.00

In recent years, new public management practices have been implemented in universities to face cuts of public funds in research and foster competition among institutions. Excellence is the key word of these transformations. This seminar investigates the effects of neoliberal reforms in Academia for gender equality in careers across countries. By comparing different case studies, it analyzes the construction of research excellence, the precarization of knowledge work and the production of science in a gendered perspective.

Institutional greetings:

Luisa Leonini, Director of the GENDERS research centre, University of Milan

Speakers:

Mieke Verloo – Radboud University, Netherlands.

Kathrin Zippel – Northeastern University, USA.

Marcela Linková - Institute of Sociology of the Czech Academy of Sciences, Czech Republic.

Kristina Binner – Johannes Kepler University, Austria.

Chair: Camilla Gaiaschi, University of Milan

Q&A:

Marina Cacace, Conoscenza e Innovazione.

Daniela Falcinelli, University of Milan.

Conclusion:

Antonio Chiesi, Director of the Department of Social and Political Sciences , University of Milan

Light refreshments and beverages will be served after the end of the seminar.

C.U.G.
Comitato Unico di Garanzia