

INTERNATIONAL POLITICS, LAW & ECONOMICS

Logic and critical thinking
Writing and communication skills

Contemporary history
Public law
Comparative social systems
Political science
History of political theories

Microeconomics
Statistics
International law
International relations
International macroeconomics

I·PE INTERNATIONAL POLITICS & ECONOMICS

Mathematics
Research methodology
Econometrics
Polimetrics
Data analysis Lab
Comparative political systems
Public economics
Models in political analysis
International economics and policy

I·PL INTERNATIONAL POLITICS & LAW

History of international relations
Sociology of globalization
EU law
War studies
Comparative public law
International human rights law /
International trade law
International politics of East Asia /
State and society in the Mediterranean and Middle East

Second foreign language
Data analysis Lab
Lab / Internship

Elective courses
Final essay

I•PLE - INTERNATIONAL POLITICS, LAW & ECONOMICS

The Bachelor's Programme in International Politics, Law and Economics (IPLE) is a 3-year English taught programme which offers interdisciplinary education in political science, law, economics, sociology and history with a particular emphasis on the contemporary international context.

With their expertise in various and diverse areas, as well as their pluriennial teaching experience, the three departments of the Faculty of Political, Economic and Social Sciences all contribute to the realisation of a programme combining multidisciplinary education – mostly offered in the course of the first two years of studies – with two specialised tracks already available since the first year: the curriculum International Politics and Economics, which focuses on political science and economic studies from comparative and international perspectives; the curriculum International Politics and Law, devoted to the study of political science and legal studies from a strongly internationalist perspective.

IPLE educational offer is characterised by adopting English as teaching language, whose practical use is improved by a specific course, and it is further enriched by the opportunity to learn a second European language. The aim of this emphasis on language skills is twofold. First, it seeks to provide students with a sound cultural background, as well as with a wide range of analytical and linguistics skills to be later employed in various Master's Programmes in law, international relations, economics or political science, either in Italy or abroad. Second, it aims to train professionals capable to work in auxiliary roles in State administrations, international organisations, and/or Italian or foreign companies involved in international trade.

IPLE offers several short training courses aimed at strengthening students' logical skills and critical capacities, as well as offering the necessary tools for data analysis. The goal is to guide students in combining the knowledge acquired through traditional courses with the development of specific skills through a teaching methodology based on a "learning by doing" approach.

Furthermore, the course of study provides several opportunities for internship in different companies, institutions or organisations, as well as exchange experiences in foreign universities, thanks to a solid and stable network of partner universities that makes it possible to carry out exchange programmes such as Erasmus, Erasmus mundus and Erasmus Placement. The aim is to create double degree programmes as soon as possible.

125 European students will be selected on the basis of the results of a written admission test and, should the University so decide, on the appropriately weighted assessment of candidates' previous high-school performance. 25 non-European candidates will be selected carefully analysing their diploma, high-school transcript, curriculum vitae and letter of motivation.